Hi Vernon,

You were enrolled in an income-driven repayment plan. Right now you're making the maximum monthly payment from your payment schedule because we didn't receive your renewal paperwork or your income no longer qualifies you for a reduced payment. You can view your payment schedule at mygreatlakes.org/go/paymentschedule.

But there's good news—if your financial circumstances change at any time, you can apply for a reduced payment.

For more information about renewing your income-driven repayment plan and potentially reducing your monthly payment to as low as $0, visit mygreatlakes.org/go/incomeplans. To complete an application online, visit StudentLoans.gov.

Let us know if you have any questions—we're here to help you.

Sincerely,

Great Lakes Borrower Services

Loan Type	The type of student loan you borrowed.
Lender	The organization that loaned you money for school, such as banks, credit unions, or the U.S. Department of Education.
Principal Balance and Interest Rate	The amount of money you borrowed for school and the interest rate, minus any principal payments or refunds received.
Subsidized	This amount doesn't build up interest during certain statuses because the federal government pays it for you, unless you reach the 150% subsidy limit and lose the government subsidy.
Unsubsidized	This amount always builds up interest.
Accrued Interest	The amount of interest that has built up so far.
Account Balance	The principal balance plus the interest that's built up so far. Keep in mind, this is not your payoff amount.
Next Payment Due Date and Amount	The date your next payment and amount is due (includes any past due amount).
